

Lindsay Staples is a private consultant with expertise in the fields of natural resource management, socio-economic and environmental impact assessment, and land claims self-government negotiations and implementation. Lindsay has a long-standing interest in the management of the Yukon North Slope and the implementation of the Inuvialuit Final Agreement. He possesses extensive experience in negotiation, facilitation and consensus-based processes involving a broad range of public policy issues.

In November, 2015 Lindsay traveled to Loliondo, Tanzania to work with the Enguserosambu Forest Trust [EFT]. This was our first major engagement with the EFT and it proved highly successful thanks to both Lindsay and the key local contacts working with the EFT – Samwel Nangiria and Mark Talash. Basic direction for work planning, budgeting and engagement in some extremely important project activities emerged from the intensive month long visit. Lindsay continues to be involved in assisting the Kesho Trust in developing project documentation for fundraising.

Lindsay documented his experience in photos of the area and the people he was working with.

<http://www.thekeshotrust.org/cms/wp-content/images/Lindsays-visit-in-pictures.pdf>

